A NEW and COMPREHENSIVE TOPOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY OF GREAT BRITAIN and IRELAND, containing every City, Town, Village, and Hamlet in the three Kingdoms. With Forty-eight Quarto Maps, engraved on steel by Sidney Hall. By John Gorton, editor of the General Biographical Dictionary, &c.

PLAN OF PUBLICATION:

I.—Each Number of the Work will contain at least forty pages of letter-press, closely printed in octavo, double columns, in a clear and legible type.

II.—A Quarto Map will accompany each Number, drawn and engraved on Steel expressly for this Work, in the first style of execution, by Mr. Sidney Hall.

III.—The whole Work will be comprised in Forty-two Numbers, one of which will be published regularly on the First of every Month, price One Shilling; or with the Map accurately coloured, One Shilling and Sixpence, forming, when complete, two handsome volumes.

From the flattering encouragement bestowed on this work, and the extensive circulation it has already attained, the publishers are stimulated to increased exertion and expense, in order to render it in every department more worthy of public patronage. Having, therefore, felt in common with their Editor, that the most accurate research would prove inefficient in obtaining a true and faithful account of the kingdom of Ireland, unless accompanied by actual local knowledge, they have made arrangements with a gentleman, many years of whose life have been occupied in attention to Irish statistics particularly, and whose name is already familiar to the public as the author of several popular volumes connected with the Topography of that country.

The publishers, accordingly, announce, that the Irish (and Welsh) Articles in the future Number of the Topographical Dictionary will be written expressly for this work, by G. N. Wright, M.A. Professor of Antiquities to the Royal Hibernian Academy, and author of several Tours in Ireland.

LANDSCAPE ILLUSTRATIONS of the WAYERLEY NOVELS. From Drawings by Barret, Brockedon, W. Daniell, R. A. Dewint, C. Fielding, J. D. Harding, S. Prout, R. R. Reinagle, R. A. Robson, Stanfield, T. Stothard, R. A. W. Westall, A. R. A. The Engravings executed in the most finished style by William and Edward Finden.

From the numerous Historical Illustrations which have appeared to embellish the Novels of the author of Waverley, it is matter of surprise that no attempt has yet been made to convey an idea of the Scenery, which, beautiful in itself, has been rendered doubly interesting by the eloquent descriptions of the distinguished author. To supply this deficiency is the object of the present undertaking.

In announcing the above-mentioned Artists as those who have undertaken to furnish the drawings, the Proprietors feel they are giving the best pledge of their earnest wish to produce a publication worthy of illustrating an author whose works have afforded such universal delight, and contributed so greatly to the literary renown of his country.

Those Views will be selected which, possessing in themselves great picturesque beauty, have been dwelt upon with admiration by the writer himself. Fidelity of representation will be strictly adhered to, and no historical allusions permitted to interfere with the reality of the scene.

This Work will be published in Parts, each containing four plates of a size to bind up with the new edition of the Waverley Novels now in progress, but the impressions will be taken on paper sufficiently large for any of the collected editions. The proprietors expect the whole will be completed in Twenty Parts.

Part II. will appear on the 31st of May, and the Work will then be continued Monthly.

Prints, royal 8vo. 4s.—India proofs, royal 4to. 7s.—Proofs before Letters, imperial 4to. 50 only taken, 10s.—Twenty-five impressions, proofs, before the Letters, accompanied with Etchings, will be taken, price 1s. per Part. An early application will be necessary to secure copies.

FITZ of FITZ FORD. A Legend of Devon. By Mrs. Bray, author of "De Foix," "The White Hoods," "The Protestant," &c. &c.

These volumes are indeed an addition to the high literary character of the fair and popular writer.—"Literary Gazette."

"This 'Legend' affords very agreeable reading, the main incidents are of a fearful interest, the characters are various, well conceived and natural; and are cast with great power and effect."—"Athenæum."

"Mrs. Bray's chief excellence is, that she is an artless writer; she acquaints herself intimately with the history, the literature, and the manners of the period of her tale; with these impressions on her mind, she dictates from the heart, and consequently her writings confer that pleasure which only can be effected in works of this description, by 'holding the mirror up to nature.'"—"Morning Journal."

"We conclude with expressing our hearty approbation of 'Fitz of Fitz Ford,' whether for the sound principles of religion and morality which it every where incidentally inculcates, its lively delineations of character, or the simplicity of style with which it is penned, and we will venture to predict that when the numerous works now pouring the intrigues and follies of the present age, shall sleep in oblivion, Mrs. Bray's Romances will survive, an example of the permanence secured by an adherence to the simplicity of nature."—"Gentleman's Magazine."
